This docket was referred by the Manwaring Subcommittee to the full committee without recommendation for further consideration. Mr. Smith stated the construction of tiny homes in Idaho has significantly increased and there is a need to establish specific residential code provisions to properly address some of the unique characteristics of tiny homes. The tiny home provisions contained in this rule would be added as an appendix to code currently being used. It may or may not be adopted by building code jurisdictions to address the installation of such homes. In addition, this rule adds an amendment that will place a limit on the required length of reinforcement lap splices for allowable stress design of masonry.
